VINTAGE NOTES

2018 vintage was marked by a winter with harsh temperatures which led to a delay in budding of about a week compared to the average of the previous years. Spring was characterized by abundant rainfall especially in May, and flowering took place in the last week of this month. Summer, initially cool, continued with higher temperatures in June and July without ever reaching excessive peaks. The strong day-night temperature variations before the harvest favoured a slow and constant ripening of the grapes. The red Montalcino Giovanni Neri was harvested on 23 September 2018.
